Oval and oblong shapes, truncated ends and soft lines – these are the key hallmarks of the Libra line.

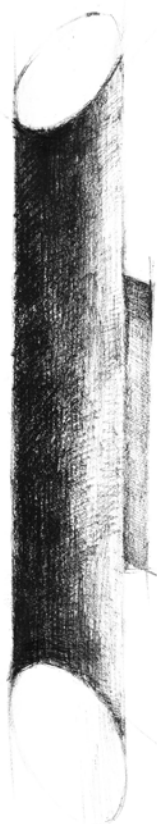

The collection is dominated by black and gold, which adds a luxurious, jewellery-like touch. These two colours seemingly contrast with each other, while creating a uniform, visually attractive and fashionable combination that successfully complements both minimalist and glamorous interiors.

This collection is built on contrasts. On the one hand, the Lecerta line features simple, geometric, and sometimes even sharp shapes, like square wall lamps. On the other hand, the designer has also created a selection of elongated and oval pendant lamps, which are reminiscent of icicles. This clash of subtlety and daring creates a unique, elegant and very stylish effect, which is wonderfully complemented by the emitted light.

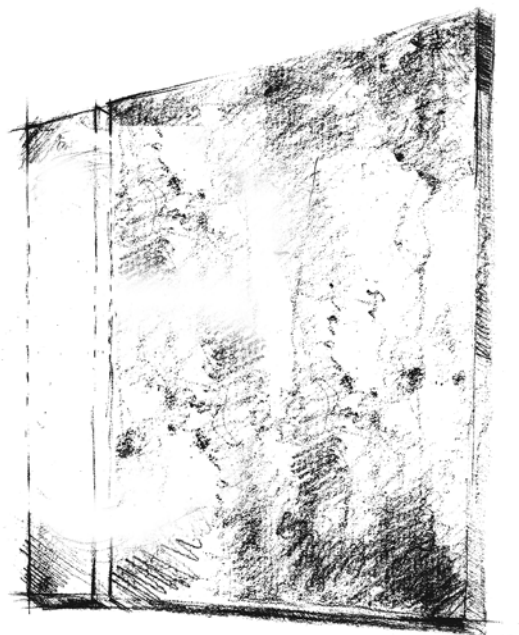

The side LED strips provide a powerful, yet subtle line of light, which perfectly lights up the room and emphasizes the luxurious nature of the raw materials from which the lamps are built. The sumptuous Carrara marble is the key to this collection. This white stone embellished with grey streaks was already incredibly popular in antiquity and was used by artists such as Michelangelo. Here, the marble is delicately softened with gold or chrome details, adding a touch of glamour.

The Lecerta line boasts a great variety of models. It comprises pendant lamps and icicle-shaped all lamps, wall lamp in the shape of a marble plate, and the marble plate itself.

The inspiration for the beautiful Cassiopeia line can be found in astronomy. The collection makes a reference to a constellation of that name. Just as more than 90 stars in this constellation illuminate the sky, so do the lamps from the Cassiopeia line illuminate interiors with their light.

The designer was also inspired by the world of theatre, getting his idea for the design from a theatre dressing room. An inseparable element of their design are dressing tables fitted with mirrors lit up in a characteristic and completely unique way.

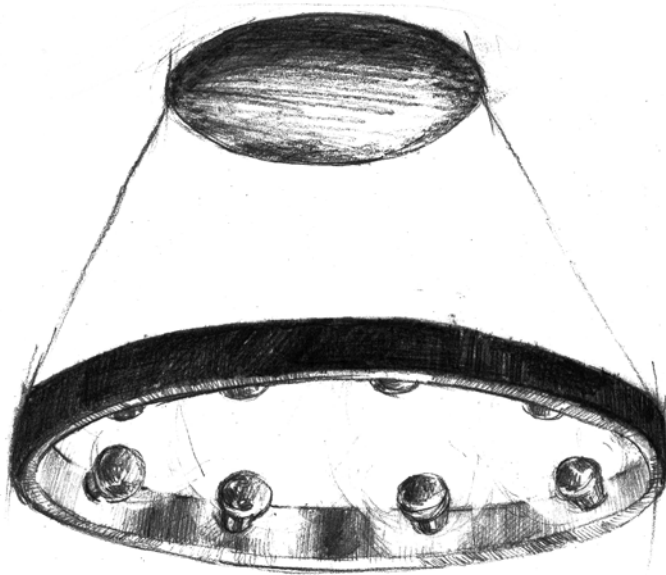

This unusual combination of inspirations led to the creation of a line of lamps which astound with their contemporary, exclusive design, soft lines and luxurious materials. The Carrara marble, already known in antiquity, is only one of the materials used. The natural stone beautifully complements the gold and silver details, making the lamp a perfect accessory to any fashionable interior.
